Project Title: A Multimodal Neural Network Approach for Evaluating and Enhancing Handwriting Proficiency in Children

[Appointment Period: 12 months]

This project focuses on developing a multimodal system for evaluating and enhancing handwriting proficiency in children. The objective is to create and optimize an innovative framework that integrates posture, eye movement, etc., data modalities to assess handwriting quality and provide feedback for improvement. The project will also explore the effectiveness of the proposed methods in enhancing children's handwriting skills.

The appointee will be responsible for supporting this project. He/she will assist in building the multimodal system and designing the experiment, searching the literature, analyzing data, writing reports, managing administrative work, supervising research assistants, and performing any other duties as assigned by the project leader(s). There will be opportunities for manuscript writing and publication in international journals.

Applicants should have a Doctoral Degree in Education Technology, Computer Science, or a related discipline, plus a good publication record and track record in research experience. They should have strong communication, presentation, and interpersonal skills in both written and spoken English and Chinese. They should also exhibit strong enthusiasm, self-motivation, and the ability to work independently and under pressure.
