

Research Assistant I (Ref: 2500643)
Department of Psychology

Project Title: The Effect of Conspiracy Theories on Social media on Youth Well-Being

[Appointment Period: 10 months]

The appointee will participate in various research projects related to social psychology and health psychology. He/she will be responsible for conducting literature review, preparing test materials, supporting data collection, and drafting research reports. He/she is also expected to provide administrative support to the research team. The appointee will have the opportunity to gain insight in how psychological research is conducted and gain first-hand experience by being involved in all stages of the research process. There will be chances for manuscript writing and publications. The experience will be very useful if the appointee is planning to pursue further studies in psychology. The appointment will be for a period of around 10 months with the possibility of renewal subject to mutual agreement and funding availability.

The applicants should have (1) a Bachelor's degree in Psychology from a recognized university (final year students are also welcome to apply for this position); (2) interest in conducting research on interpersonal relationships and psychological well-being; (3) good communication skills in both written and spoken English and Chinese (Cantonese); (4) knowledge in research methods and statistics; (5) enthusiasm, self-motivation, and the ability to work independently.
