

Guest Lecturer (English Language Education) (Part-time) (Ref: 2500837)
Department of English Language Education

The appointee will participate in teaching and developing courses in English language teaching methodologies, literacy development and curriculum design, tailored to primary education. He/she will engage diverse student cohorts, including undergraduates, postgraduate diploma students, and in-service teachers, through innovative pedagogical approaches such as lectures, seminars, workshops, and micro-teaching. He/she will provide guidance to students in the capacity of academic adviser/programme year leader; supervise students on teaching practice and contribute to departmental and faculty activities and management. He/she will be responsible for course design and/or improvement for new and existing programmes, integrating emerging technology and evidence-based practices. He/she will deliver professional development workshops for in-service primary school teachers, focusing on contemporary issues in English language pedagogy, such as differentiated instruction, digital literacy, and assessment for learning; and he/she will contribute to the development of PDPs that support new curriculum policy and practice and promote career-long professional learning. Applicants with local teaching experience and QTS will have an advantage.
